FORGING THE ISSUE.

The exclusive and authentic announcement in THE WORLD this morning that Representative Mills, of Texas, will be appointed Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, shows that Speaker CLEVELAND is determined to force the issue made by the President.

MR. MILLS IS A TARIFF REFORMER WHO "MEANS BUSINESS."

He has no patience with the trimmers' policy of always promising and never performing. With sound convictions and the full courage of them, he still has the sense and tact to know that the business of statesmanship is to get the best practicable good when the best possible good cannot be attained.

The selection of Mr. MILLS as the leader of the Democrats in the House means that the policy of the party is to be tariff reform.

NO OBSTRUCTION.

It is the duty of Speaker CLEVELAND to see that the will of the great majority of the Democrats in the House shall not this year be thwarted by any obstructions within the party.

MR. RANDALL IS A VERY USEFUL MAN AT THE HEAD OF THE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE. No silly notion of "degrading" or "punishing" him has ever been entertained in any quarter that is entitled to respect.

But the interests of the country and of the party are superior to those of any man. Either Mr. RANDALL should agree not to interpose the appropriation bills to prevent a consideration of tax reduction or the rules should be so amended as to give the House control of its business.

BECKER'S EMPTY SHOES.

The Rev. CHARLES A. BEERY, of Wolverhampton, England, has done a sensible thing in declining the call from Plymouth Church. The call was an ill-advised one. Its acceptance would have been a serious mistake.

HENRY WARD BECKER was nothing if not intensely American. He was a patriot of patriots. The spirit of Americanism pervaded his every thought and utterance. In the nature of things it would be impossible for any foreigner, however talented, to follow in his footsteps and carry on his great work in its original spirit.

BECKER'S big shoes are still empty. They never will be filled by anybody. But there are certainly other Americans who can work in the lines he laid down. If not, rather than import an Englishman, let somebody do Becker's old sermons every Sunday. There is lots of vitality in them yet.

LABOR'S REAL FOF.

MR. COBERTLAND PALMER is quite right in holding that $365 the average annual income of workmen in this country, does not represent a fair return for the toil of the wealth producers.

But he is wrong in attributing this unjust state of affairs entirely to competition. That is rapidly becoming an obsolete factor in the business world. It is the combination of capital rather than competition that holds wages down and puts prices up.

Fair play in an open field gives the workman at least a chance to secure his deserts. Monopoly slams the door of advancement in his face.

THE SANGUINE MITKIEWICZ.

MITKIEWICZ still insists that he has captured China, and presents some interesting documents to prove it. It is notable, however, that these documents are mostly correspondence, and that the copy of the much-talked-of contract is merely referred to and not exhibited.

From a careful perusal of these letters it is quite apparent, even if it is not dawned upon the sanguine MITKIEWICZ, that the really shrewd game in this matter is being played by LI HUNG CHANG, the Chinese Prime Minister. His "concessions" consist chiefly of his willingness to use big amounts of American money without assuming much responsibility for its repayment.

The guileless MITKIEWICZ should bear in mind the extraordinary operations of BART HARTZ's Heston Chinese in the game "he did not understand."

mind the extraordinary operations of BART HARTZ's Heston Chinese in the game "he did not understand."

SHIPS AND FORTS.

A high-tariff surplus-quandarer says that "if this year's appropriations come any where near the total asked by the departments, they ought to pay for something of permanent value and real necessity—ships and forts, for example."

The estimates ask for $50,000,000 more than would be the case if there were not the temptation of "an overflowing Treasury."

The experience of the past does not hold much encouragement to getting "something of permanent value" from expenditure for "ships and forts."

Hundreds of millions have been spent for ships and guns since the close of the war, and yet we have no effective war vessels or ordnance. Nothing becomes obsolete so quickly as a war ship, unless it is a fort.

To greatly increase the present rate of expenditure would be to throw the money away. Stop the surplus!

A SOOTHING RETROSPECT.

Ex-Congressional Clown Hons, of Michigan, has been making the Boston Republicans laugh. He did it by saying that he "could take solid comfort when he cannot sleep at night in thinking over what we have done for the country."

For a certain type of Republicans, no doubt the retrospect is pleasing, as a sample of what they hope for in the future. The Credit Mobilier, the naval contracts, the land grabbing, the Star Route plunder, the Treasury supplies "perquisites," the Indian trading post plums, and all the fat pickings and stealings of a party long in power, are well calculated to give satisfaction to the HONS, DORSEYS, BELKNAPS and ROBERTSONS of the G. O. P.

But their retrospect is more soothing than their prospect.

SUICIDING FOR LOVE.

Of all the absurd actions to which men are prone, that of killing one's self because deprived of one woman is surely the most preposterous. It may be highly romantic and desperate to die for love, but it can be done only once—and what is the gain?

To furnish a "story" for the reporter, a "job" for the Coroner and shame and grief to friends is surely not a high ambition. With the world full of lovable and loving women, why should a man "his quietus make" for one of them?

It is too much like jumping into the sea because you lose one fish from your hook.

THE HIPPODROME BLOODERS.

If prize-fighting is disreputable in itself, what can be said of hippodrome prize-fighting? Every well-informed sporting man knows that the latter is the sort of unmanly art that has characterized recent ring contests.

When there are subsidized referees and a gang of plug-uglies ready to interrupt the proceedings, if their favorite is weakening, the prize ring sinks to an even lower level than its wont. The CARNEY-McAULIFFE fiasco is a case directly in point, and the proposed DEMPSEY-REAGAN fist-cuffs looks like another.

With these methods the sluggers will suppress themselves. The hippodrome will "knock out" the prize ring.

Seven people were injured yesterday by a falling column in the Church of the Immaculate Conception. And there are two more churches in this vicinity liable to be burned at any time on account of defective heating apparatus. Is no one responsible for the safety of the houses of worship?

In the death of Mrs. JOHN JACOB ASTOR, momentarily expected by her physicians, New York will lose one of her noblest women. Mrs. Astor's name has for years been the synonym of most liberal and well-directed charity.

The shut-down of the Joliet Rolling Mills is of course attributed by the war-tariff organs to the President's Message. But what shut down more than half the mills in the country in 1882, and kept them closed for years?

One of the preachers said yesterday that "women fool with dudes, but admire strong men." Some of the dudes are well up in muscle, and the combination seems to be popular with the sex.

The Lehigh coal miners, who earn from 60 to 90 cents a day, must be greatly impressed by Mr. BLAINE'S concern lest they be compelled to accept the "pauper wages" of England.

At a prayer-meeting in the Globe Theatre in Boston last night over five hundred Harvard students were present. There was evidently some misunderstanding about the programme.

The pretty girls who are paying their tribute to Master HOFFMANN in kisses should remember that genius sometimes shows as much precocity in the tender passion as in its special bent.

Mr. Abbey announces still two more concerts to be given by little Josef Hofmann at the Metropolitan Opera-house. These will take place Tuesday evening and Thursday afternoon. The members of the company engaged to support Gerster will again participate.

The hundredth performance of Messrs. Robson and Crane in "The Henrietta," at the Union Square Theatre, will take place on Dec. 21. Souvenirs will be presented. "The Henrietta" will undoubtedly run until Easter. Next Thursday a political theatre party of seventy-five, headed by George H. Forster, President of the Board of Aldermen, will see it.

Thomas Lower, banker and capitalist, of Minneapolis, and C. F. Alvord, a well-known railroad man, of Louisville, are quartered at the Victoria.

With others at the Fifth Avenue are E. C. Huxley, of Boston; W. P. Tate, of England; William B. Florence, the actor, returning from a month's tour; and ex-Senator Powell Clayton, of Arkansas.

Among the guests of the St. James are L. G. Richard, of Toledo; W. P. Wetherell, a St. Louis railroad man; A. W. Newberry, a Washington Territory legislator; Henry O. Simpson, of Boston; John W. Norton, the well-known theatre manager of St. Louis.

And what makes you think so?" "I'm only twenty-four was the reply, "but I have already proposed to five different girls."

WORLDLINGS.

A Hartford coin collector has a cent piece of the United States coinage of 1789, which is considered to be worth nearly $500.

The Detroit Journal says that there are men in Michigan so mean and despicable that "their souls would rattle around in a bear's ear like a pea in a bass drum."

She said she had been betrayed by William George Mangold, a son of Prof. George Mangold, of the Normal College, and formerly a clerk in her father's drug-store at 709 Seventh Avenue. At her father's death he had young Mangold, she said, promised the dying man that she would marry him. She declared that Mangold was the father of her two children.

Last week, when baby No. 2 was only three weeks old, Mrs. Heberling and her daughter were turned out of the Vanderbilt House, at Forty-second street and Lexington Avenue, for failure to pay board.

Mrs. Heberling sought a founding asylum, but her mother-in-law rebelled against the rules of the institution that she must give up her child forever, and she carried the infant to Mangold's home, 236 East Eighty-third street, deposited it on a sofa in the parlor and said:

"I have one of the children, you must care for the other one."

On Sunday a policeman was called to remove the body of a child, which he found that it had been left in the vestibule. The infant was turned over to the kindly care of Matron Webb, at Police Headquarters, where later in the day she was joined by the mother. The case went to court and the Justice declined to interfere, owing to the conflicting stories told by young Mangold and the woman.

The mother and Mangold decided to arrange Matilda on a charge of abandoning her infant. When she heard this decision she tearfully responded:

"I didn't abandon my baby. I merely left it for its father to support."

"Well," said the kind-hearted proprietor, "the Justice must listen to your story now, and an agent of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children will be present, and the case will be disposed of on its merits."

The Mangolds, father and son, deny the girl's story, claim that it is a case of persecution, and apply to a court for an appointment of a commission to settle the amount of money that it must pay to that road, provided the section of the track to be used is not longer than 1,000 feet.

If it must operate on a section of another track longer than 1,000 feet, it can do so only by coming to an agreement with the old company, whose lines it would use.

There are four roads which track the Fulton street road must use. The new road must run on the single track of the Bleecker street line from Fulton ferry to William street, and on the double track of the Fulton street line from William street to Chambers street, and then there is a piece of the Fulton street line, from Fulton to Chambers street, to be used.

There is no legal manner in which they can compel the company to come to such an agreement, except through an act of the Legislature.

The track of the Dry Dock line must be used for 800 feet from St. Paul's Church street to Fulton street. The electric cars must run over 200 feet of the track of the Ninth avenue line in Fulton street, from Greenwich to Washington street, and then there is a piece of the Fulton street line, from Fulton to Chambers street, to be used.

Commissions will arrange between the new company and these three latter named companies. The Bleecker street line seems to be an insurmountable obstacle to its progress just now.

The Bleecker street line stops on the west side of South street. The new line will cross the Fulton street line, and will run on the Fulton street line, and will be used for 200 feet of the track of the Ninth avenue line in Fulton street, from Greenwich to Washington street, and then there is a piece of the Fulton street line, from Fulton to Chambers street, to be used.

There are hundreds of poor families in the Fifth and Sixth wards who will miss him. Although brought up in the wild and reckless life of the lower stratum of politics, he possessed a gentle demeanor and never lost his temper unless the provocation was very great. He always shot and drop his passengers and Friel twenty years ago in self-defense. The killing of Friel, however, preyed upon Hartigan, and he seldom referred to that election day tragedy.

The funeral promises to be one of the largest that has ever been held in the lower part of the city. Hartigan was universally known in the Fourth and Sixth Wards, and was extremely popular. Although steadfast in his political and factional allegiance, he was not without friends, and eventually to go home in his stocking feet.

MATILDA AND YOUNG MANGOLD.

The Druggist's Daughter Held on Charge of Abandoning Her Child.

The police at Headquarters were puzzled this morning by the case of Matilda Heberling and her babe. Inspector Steers had Miss Heberling repeat her story to him.

She said she had been betrayed by William George Mangold, a son of Prof. George Mangold, of the Normal College, and formerly a clerk in her father's drug-store at 709 Seventh Avenue. At her father's death he had young Mangold, she said, promised the dying man that she would marry him. She declared that Mangold was the father of her two children.
